HARDWOOD GRADES

FAS (First and Seconds) – The highest grade available, generally limited to Southern and Appalachian hardwoods due to minimum dimension requirements (6” x 8’). Though not required to be clear, FAS boards must be 83.1/3% clear or usable.

S&B (Select and Better) – The Northern hardwood equivalent of FAS. Basically the same tolerances as FAS, but allows for minimum board size of 4” x 6’. Most Northern hardwoods are graded using this format to accommodate the smaller dimension logs that result from an abbreviated growing season.

#1 Common – The grade below FAS and S/B. Generally used in the cabinet and furniture industry. A 1-Common board must be 66.2/3% usable. 1-Common lumber can be used in millwork, but should be limited to small profiles, or profiles that do not require long, clear pieces.

HARD MAPLE, CHERRY AND WALNUT IN MILLWORK

Certain hardwoods require special attention when being quoted or used in architectural millwork, as they may have some undesirable characteristics that are allowed for in their respective grades.

White Hard Maple – Northern Hard Maple is generally desired for it’s mostly uniform white color. The grading format for White Hard Maple does not, however, require that a board be 100% white.

Cherry – North American Cherry has distinctive white to yellow sapwood. While generally not desirable in finished millwork, this sapwood is not considered a defect, and is therefore permitted in product milled from Cherry unless otherwise specified.

Black Walnut – Walnut characteristically has more natural defects than other hardwoods and, in fact, has it’s own grading rules to accommodate this. Walnut is a short, stocky tree that yields narrow, short lumber. It additionally has distinctly light sapwood that, while normally steamed to blend with the heartwood, is not considered a defect.

All profiles in this catalog are full size.
